Alexandria, VA - River Valley Occupational Health in Russellville, AR has been officially recognized as Nationally Accredited for Administration of Drug and Alcohol Testing Programs (NAADATP) by the Drug & Alcohol Testing Industry Association (DATIA). This accreditation means that their facility, operations and personnel meet the highest standards in areas such as regulatory compliance, client confidentiality, accountability, company service standards, operational practices, business ethics, and professional competency for drug and alcohol testing program management. A primary requirement of the NAADATP Program is that principal(s) of River Valley Occupational Health have attended comprehensive training on standards of program management and have passed an industry developed exam on these policies and procedures.

According to DATIA's Executive Director, Melissa Moskal, "As a Nationally Accredited for Administration of Drug and Alcohol Testing Programs facility, River Valley Occupational Health's clients can be assured that they are committed to offering superior program services while adhering to the highest professional standards. We congratulate them on this achievement."

The Nationally Accredited for Drug and Alcohol Testing Program Management (NAADATP) program was created by quality minded leaders in the drug and alcohol testing industry interested in raising the level of proficiency in drug and alcohol testing program management. This program aim at upholding the highest standards in the program management company's operation and personnel.

Anyone seeking to locate a Nationally Accredited for Administration of Drug and Alcohol Testing Programs facility from across the country should call 1-800-355-1257, Monday - Friday, 8:30am - 5:30pm E.T.
